

MOS 3398B 551 – Special Topics, Private Equity: Theory, Practice, Purpose – The Brookfield Model
Instructor: Professor Kelsey Ramsden

This is a new course being offered for the first time. The primary objective of the course is to improve students' ability to understand the concepts and institutions involved in private equity. Students will also have the opportunity to explore the purpose and impact of private equity, both in Canada and globally. The course will be applied in nature and focus on specific case studies, modeled on investments by Brookfield, a leading global investment firm with a unique approach to private equity investing. Lectures and guest speakers will provide economic fundamentals and institutional context.
