Course Description:

This course offers a comprehensive survey of representative works in pre-modern Chinese literature, spanning from the twelfth century BCE to the eighteenth century. Students will examine a rich array of genres—including poetry, drama, and fictional prose—situated within their evolving socio-historical contexts. By examining traditional Chinese literature as a dynamic cultural phenomenon, the course will highlight the aesthetic values embedded in these texts, with particular emphasis on their cultural foundations and ideological significance. Through close reading and contextual analysis, students will gain insight into how literature both reflected and shaped the intellectual currents of its time. Special attention will be given to the development of the Chinese language, tracing its transformation from classical forms to vernacular expressions. Taught in Chinese.
