Course Description:

Operations is the term that refers to the process by which an organization converts inputs (e.g., labor, material, knowledge, equipment) into outputs (goods and/or services) for both internal and external markets. In this course, we will study how to manage this process. MOS 3330 is an introductory course providing an overview of the operations management concept used as a framework for analyzing operations management situations and as a basis for general management situations. We will study strategic issues related to how firms determine the way in which they will compete, as well as tactical and operational decision-making.

Learning Outcomes: one outcome per entry

- To develop your decision-making skills by applying operations management concepts to business situations.
- To expose you to the main concepts of operations management in manufacturing, service, and other organizations that model the expectations of future employers.
- To provide you with useful tools for problem solving in business and government environments.
- To provide you with opportunities to demonstrate effective written & oral communication skills and strengthen teamwork abilities.
