Course Description:

This course will provide students with a broad overview of the relatively new and exciting field of Health Psychology. We will examine research and theory that explores the bi-directional relationships of cognition and behaviour with physical health and illness. Topics include but are not limited to: the effects of stress on health, psychological predictors of health-related behavior (e.g., substance use, exercise), and coping with serious illness. We will also explore how research in this field is applied to support both prevention and intervention programming.

Learning Outcomes: one outcome per entry

- Possess a detailed understanding of the current literature in Health Psychology
- Be able to apply and think critically about relevant research and theory
- Understand the role of health psychologists in research and practice
